MORE THAN CIRCUS!

FOREWORD

Memory, identity, and heritage: three notions that are intimately linked together in a subtle system of relationships that mix together, feeding off each other. Heritage, whether tangible or intangible, is often seen as a means for passing on memory, and seems to be the perfect tool for building shared identities. But far from being something that is fixed, it is constantly being made, unmade and remade as divergences arise and foster dialogue. Heritage is also moving, and is a political, economic and social issue in our contemporary societies.

Celebrating it therefore becomes a unique opportunity to pass on concepts and practices, produce objects of knowledge and memory, and reinforce the recognition of a whole sector on the European stage.

2018 marks the 250th anniversary of modern circus, the Year of Protest, in homage to the 50th anniversary of the events of May 1968, and the European Year of Cultural Heritage. In this context, FRESH CIRCUS will be setting up shop for the first time in Brussels, at the Théâtre National.

Each edition of this Circostrada flagship event is developed in close collaboration with one or more network members (in this case Espace Catastrophe & Wallonie Bruxelles/Théâtre Danse) and relies on the support of a dedicated working group (25 network members from over 10 different countries, just for this edition), which lays the foundation for the seminar and sets out the issues at stakes for circus arts at an international level.

The initial question raised by this fourth edition seems simple, but the challenge is no less complex. How can we change our relationship to stereotypes, while prompting discussion of the challenges and outlook of today's creative circus arts?

While this exercise might seem rather formal, the idea is to give meaning to our future individual and collective actions, and expand and increase the long-term impact that they will have on circus arts as a whole.

The purpose is to work around the "More than Circus" thread, engaging in discussion so as to get to know each other better and debating together and examining ourselves in order to better face tomorrow's challenges and put forward new ways of acting. Three days to celebrate circus and Europe, three days to re-examine our "practices, performances, expressions, knowledge and know-how", three days to turn our dreams into reality!

Circostrada Team

Head of Development at ARTCENA
Circostrada Network Coordinator

International Coordination Officer

Laura Gérard,
International Communication Officer

Since 2003, Circostrada Network has been working to develop and structure the fields of circus and street arts in Europe and beyond. With more than 100 members from over 30 countries, it helps building a sustainable future for these sectors by empowering cultural players through activities in observation and research, professional exchanges, advocacy, capacity-building and information.

ARTCENA is the French National Centre for Circus Arts, Street Arts and Theatre. It works towards its missions in three main areas: the sharing of knowledge through a digital platform and activities of documentation, the support to professionals via mentoring and training, the development of these three artistic fields by providing funding to authors and carrying out international development. It coordinates the Circostrada network and has a permanent seat on its steering committee.

FRESH CIRCUS IS COMING TO BRUSSELS!

After three successful editions at La Villette, Paris, we are delighted to announce that FRESH CIRCUS is coming to Brussels! Thank you to the teams who have contributed to the success of this incredible event, securing its future by taking it beyond a fixed venue or location. FRESH CIRCUS has now become a travelling initiative, reflecting one of circus' key traits.

Thanks also to the teams who will be taking over for this fourth edition in Brussels, including the FRESH CIRCUS working group, contributors, curators, moderators and participants, our Belgian counterparts, partners, the teams of Théâtre National and the Circostrada team. Get ready for three days of intense, varied and diverse encounters and discussion!

FRESH CIRCUS#4

THE PROGRAMME: BETWEEN THE LINES

FRESH CIRCUS#4 programme was designed based on 3 main themes:
3 threads which are broken down into a diverse set of activities throughout the seminar.

You can either choose to follow one of these three paths from end-to-end or browse through parts of one and explore another, depending on your wish and mood.

These paths are built around the three following themes:

INNOVATION

IMAGES AND AUDIENCES

ARTISTIC PATHS AND CREATION PROCESSES

Each thematic path includes different meeting, exchange and reflective modules so as to explore a theme in depth and each of them is divided as such:

1 introductory thematic plenary session, to get a sense of the stakes
and draw inspiration

● TUESDAY 13
16:00 ▶ 17:30

3 roundtables and 3 participative workshops that will enable you to further explore the selected theme from three different perspectives

● WEDNESDAY 14
10:00 ▶ 12:30 & 14:30 ▶ 17:00

3 work groups to produce acts
or practical instruments and to imagine what the future may look like

● THURSDAY 15
10:00 ▶ 12:00

Each thematic path was designed in order to give the opportunity to participants, if they so wish, to explore different themes throughout the seminar. The different modules are punctuated by friendly moments to foster new encounters and discussions.

250 years after the invention of "Modern Circus" by Patty and Philip Astley in London in 1768, and 50 years after the social, political and cultural uprisings of May 1968, which resulted in a handful of pioneers inventing "Nouveau Cirque" in France, Europe and beyond, circus has never stopped questioning, seeking and reinventing itself. "Circus is now a plural medium", explains Jérôme Thomas, researcher and master juggler. "It is no longer a donkey and cart, but an enormous bookcase with thousands of drawers." That is what makes our practices so powerful. They are living and active forces, with innovative perspectives, progressive subject matter, in tune with society, genres and people. Between the two stereotypical extremes of the red noses of traditional circus and the sometimes-abstract corporality of contemporary circus, what is the vision of circus today? This plenary session will take you on a unique journey of images, sound and words, navigating the clichés in order to better pinpoint the real, subtle and illusive nature of current circus scenes.

As observers of circus development across our respective territories and beneficiaries of its diversity, we are dreaming up a future of new projects, new developments and new practices. Circus never ceases to explore new territories, innovate and build different relationships with other art forms, institutions, public authorities and the territories where it develops. What are these relationships today? What sectors are opening up to our practices?

What image has circus given itself? And what is its true image? Why does the general public perceive the effect of tradition despite the fact that the sector is highly creative and constantly changing? For almost forty years, circus has been moving at breakneck speed, breaking away from, but not rejecting, the traditions acquired over the previous centuries. An artistic, educational and social revolution is underway. How can we "convert the try", pursue this metamorphosis, continue to imagine the circus of the future and retain audiences?

Circus is an incredible crossroads of exchange, where ideas collide and come together. With its body language and universal codes, circus transcends all, including time, boundaries and inequalities. In a rapidly-changing Western society, the opportunities for circus are huge. Circus cannot reject its political dimension, whatever its practice or location. Let's look for people who make circus a constant testing ground. Let's try to map the future landscape together.

Recently, innovative links with private sectors have demonstrated that these partnerships not only provide an additional source of funding, but also consolidate and ensure the long-term future of organizations and projects, boost audience numbers and create new forms of cooperation. Let's explore some of the opportunities together.

In recent times, artists even escape from the standardized artistic boundaries to find inspiration within other industries (technology, science, business). What artistic and social potential lies within these trans-disciplinary collaborations? What is the impact of transdisciplinarity on creative processes?
	 "IDEAS ROOM#2" : PARTICIPATIVE WORKSHOP 14:30 ▶ 17:00	Are artistic categories useful or do they hinder the creative process? What new creative methodologies arise when working above or in-between categories? What role do arts institutions play within an innovative and transdisciplinary process? Circus iconography has always been shared through a variety of means, including pictures, photos, texts, performances and venues. Each of these aspects addresses different audiences, such as the general public, artists, programmers, institutions or the press. Through reflective and participatory workshops to compare the opinions of recognized experts in these different sectors, we hope to kick-start discussion around this topic.

Following up the points of view sprung from the morning session, and making room for more cases introduced by the workshop participants themselves, through reflective and participative workshop we will facilitate and kick-start discussion around this controversial, yet crucial, our topic.

Reaching new audiences is one of the biggest challenges of the circus field today. Where can we find them? Should we focus on seeking new audiences or should we engage more deeply with the existing ones? What is the role of local communities?

This workshop is tailored around the sharing of experiences of very different institutions and individuals, seeking to understand what could and could not work in diverse circumstances.

There is not one way to look for new audiences, but techniques and strategies used in different countries and even different sectors can bring valuable additions to existing working models. Participants will be invited to work in groups on different scenarios proposed by moderator to use their common knowledge and create new working models. The content will be led by pool of knowledge owned by participants, their experience of successes and failures. Invited speakers will work as guides and advisors and helping participants to challenge themselves to seek for new methods.

"STORIES ROOM#9" :
ROUNDTABLE
10:00 ▶ 12:30

A number of venues have the potential to inspire and are home to circus creation, including big tops, performance halls, the street and many other unusual venues. What makes circus artists choose between a big top or performance hall? What does it mean to create a street circus performance? What about a performance in an industrial wasteland? Or in a forest? Why choose circular or front-facing configurations? Circus artists with unique backgrounds will discuss the role of space in circus creation.

"IDEAS ROOM#9" :
PARTICIPATIVE WORKSHOP
14:30 ▶ 17:00

The diversity of venues for circus creation is reflected in the great variety of production and distribution models. The constraints, possibilities and challenges are very different when creating or hosting circus performances in big tops, performance halls, the street or in situ. Join us for an afternoon of work to consider, debate and discuss issues associated with the production and distribution of circus performances in relation to different venues and contexts.

What's next? Together with an "ACT'or" in charge of facilitating the sessions, discussions will move forward in order to work, produce and leave a lasting mark to design the future of circus arts.

ADVOCATING FOR CIRCUS ARTS

In the course of the next four years, Circostrada Network together with a dedicated internal workgroup composed of several of its members, will keep developing a series of actions to increase the recognition and legitimacy of circus arts and street arts throughout Europe.

During FRESH CIRCUS#4, in close collaboration with the Minister-President of the Federation Wallonia-Brussels, the Ministry of Culture of the Federation Wallonia-Brussels, the Ministry of Promotion of Brussels, it will organize a working seminar focused on public policies supporting circus arts in Europe and in the world.

The seminar follows in the footsteps of the first two seminars, one co-organised with the French Ministry of Culture in Paris (France) at La Villette during FRESH CIRCUS#3 in April 2016, and the other co-organised with the Portuguese State Secretariat of Culture in Santa Maria da Feira (Portugal) during FRESH STREET#2 in May 2017.

The working seminar taking place during FRESH CIRCUS#4 will have four main objectives:

- ▶ To give an overview of the most current public policies and schemes in Europe and in the world, highlight shared issues and keep developing a space for dialogue and exchange of best practices between stakeholders on an international scale;
- ▶ To share proven advocacy tools at the European and international levels, as well as any evaluation strategy put in place to measure their effectiveness and pertinence;
- ▶ To define key priorities for the future of the Creative Europe programme, in order to raise awareness on these sectors at the European level and to contribute to developing a sustainable environment for the actors working in the field;
- ▶ To further the consolidation of an informal and flexible network, gathering officers in charge of cultural policies to reflect on the issues related to the development of contemporary artistic creation in circus arts.

The next working seminar will take place in Galway next May 2019, in the frame of FRESH STREET#3, in partnership with ISACS (Irish Street Arts, Circus & Spectacle Network) and Galway 2020-European Capital of Culture.

CLOSED SEMINAR INTENDED FOR PUBLIC POLICY MAKERS

- MONDAY 12 AND TUESDAY 13, MARCH
- 📍 HOUSE OF EUROPEAN HISTORY & THÉÂTRE NATIONAL
- ✓ UPON INVITATION ONLY

A seminar dedicated to public policy makers is organized prior to the start of FRESH CIRCUS#4. In close collaboration with the French Ministry of Culture and its Belgian counterparts as well as with the support of an internal work group of Circostrada Network focused on advocacy issues, European policy makers and institutional officials gather for two days in order to exchange and reflect on today and tomorrow's schemes for public policies supporting circus arts.
